

Fourth Print Issue of Obaasema Magazine Published

The light, fun and engaging issue you don't want to miss!

PHILADELPHIA, July 19, 2009 -- The ultimate empowerment publication for African women, Obaasema magazine, has successfully released its fourth print issue. As it matures in years, so does its fascinating content, as clearly demonstrated in the latest edition.

This fourth print issue features the talented Canadian-South African singer/songwriter, Zaki Ibrahim, on its cover. Articles highlighted fit under its well-defined channels of features, health, beauty, fashion, relationships, entertainment, home design and spirituality. Among this issue's interesting pieces is an interview with founder of the sophisticated handbag line, Naana B, as well as a display of the craft of some of Africa's most endowed designers.

Obaasema magazine was initially launched online in June, 2006 and reaches readers across the United States, Africa, Asia, Europe, Oceania, South and North America. Its first print issue was released in July, 2008 with new features and even more appealing content.
